

HAGGERY LUCK. WILL M'CARLTON ESCAPE?

The Bridge-Jumper Gets the Police Court in a Quandary.

No One Will Identify Him, and His Admission Don't Count.

He Is Bailed While the Fourth Ward Is Searched.

John J. Haggerty, who says he jumped off the Brooklyn Bridge, is willing to make an affidavit to that effect, and is just as willing to take whatever punishment the law prescribes, yet the law is in a quandary as to what to do with him.

Every one knows that Haggerty did jump. There were hundreds who saw his body tumbling over and over in its descent, but no one saw his face, and, therefore, none can swear to his identity, and his own admission counts for nothing.

It was a weighty problem with which Justice Haggerty was confronted in the Tombs Police Court this morning. The two bridge officers, Brady and Farrell, who helped the man out of the water, were willing to swear to that, but nothing more.

It was in vain that the Justice ran his fingers through his hair. There was no way to solve the difficulty, save one, and that was to remand the man until some one can be found to make the necessary affidavit.

Diogenes' search for an honest man will be nothing to the raking over of the Fourth Ward. It will get to-night from the bridge police in order to find the important witness, that is, such a man.

The night's incarceration in the Oak street police station did not seem to hurt Haggerty. In the least, he looked none the worse for his jump when first brought into the Tombs Court this morning.

One hour in the "pen," however, drove the perspiration from his face in a stream, and he begged to be let out into the cooler atmosphere of the courtroom. His first act was to engage Jimmy Oliver, the least, and because the latter had also defended the other bridge jumper, Larry Donovan, and Steve Higgins.

Mr. The McAllister, not Ward, but McAllister of the Fourth Ward, who keeps a liquor store at 222 Cherry street, shook hands with the jumper and said he was ready to go on his bail bond, which he afterwards signed.

No one believes that Haggerty attempted suicide. As "The Evening World" reported, Haggerty jumped from the bridge while intoxicated shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. For a long time he was full of Fourth Ward whiskey may have had something to do with his good luck.

The people who saw him jump looked for his dead body, but instead he came up smiling and looking toward the New York shore. He sent his would-be rescuers to a warm climate, then offered to fight an inch of the Fourth Ward with one hand tied behind his back.

The Fourth Ward was well represented in the courtroom this morning, and many were the admiring glances cast in the direction of the man, who a few minutes had made himself famous. They sneered and sniggered when Lawyer Keane tried to get the man to testify. In fact, it looked at one time as if the officials would be unable to find a charge upon which to hold the man.

Clerk Malone remembered that about three years ago a law was passed with special reference to bridge jumpers, and the library was searched for it, but without success. The two bridge policemen, Farrell and Brady, were called in, and had a copy of the act, but they had not.

Finally one of them found a copy of the ordinance passed by the bridge committee, and on this the Clerk proceeded to draw the complaint.

"Which of you two officers saw the man jump off?" asked Mr. Malone.

Both looked a little sheepish, and then Brady replied that neither saw the man jump.

"All we can swear to is that we took him out of the water," he said. "Let it go, then," said Mr. Malone.

The Clerk explained that they could not do so, and that the man must testify during this session, but the offense consisted in actually jumping off the bridge, and, unless he was willing to swear to his jump made an affidavit, he could not be held.

"As a matter of fact," said Brady, "no policeman saw him jump. The only one who did was him was a carpenter who lives somewhere in the Fourth Ward."

"Go and get him, then," was the reply, and immediately both started out to hunt through the streets of the ward.

This is the bridge ordinance, taken from the act passed June 3, 1887, and adopted by the Board of Aldermen of the same year:

"Any person who wilfully jumps from the bridge, or enters upon any part of the bridge for the purpose of jumping or dropping therefrom, and any person who assists or abets another person to jump or drop therefrom is guilty of a misdemeanor."

During all this time the bridge jumper was sitting within the inclosure talking with his counsel, and he had been let out of the pen because it was too warm. His wife was also in court.

"I do it again this minute for half a dollar," said Haggerty confidentially to "The Evening World" reporter.

"Why, it is as easy as rolling off a log. Oh, no. That was not my first jump by any means. I leaped off many other bridges, but they were small."

Afterwards Haggerty's wife denied that her husband had ever jumped before.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the officers got back from their fruitless hunt, and they were told that the man had been let out of the pen because it was too warm. His wife was also in court.

THE BRIDGE JUMPER. SHOCKED BY A LIVE WIRE.

Lineman McMullery Fatally Injured in Jersey City.

Rendered Unconscious and Caught in a Network of Wires.

Edward McMullery, a Lineman of the Western Union Telegraph Company, who lives in East Newark, met with a shocking accident in Jersey City today.

McMullery, with a number of other linemen, was sent to repair a wire which was strung along Newark avenue. He ascended a pole between Grove and Erie streets at about 10.30 A. M., and reached for a telegraph wire which had become entangled with the other wires.

As he did so he was seen to tremble violently and fall over the network of wires. He retained a hold with one arm about the telegraph pole.

Electric light wires are strung along the same poles on this avenue, and it was apparent that McMullery had received a violent shock while trying to untangle the telegraph wire.

Much excitement prevailed in the neighborhood, and a crowd collected in the street and gazed up at the prostrate form in the network of wires. It was generally supposed that McMullery was dead.

Foreman Samuel Meyers of the gang ward in the East Newark station, who was called to the scene, found McMullery was not dead, but unconscious. He never regained consciousness, however, and a rope around McMullery's waist, and, throwing the rope over the arm of the pole, the unconscious man was lowered to the ground and removed to the hospital.

There it was found that he had been burned by the electric current on the breast over the heart, on his forehead over the left eye and on his hands and legs. One arm was almost severed. There is little chance for the man's recovery.

DR. PERRINE GETS BAIL.

Arrested After Being Beaten by Kellington, Whose Home He Destroyed.

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 20.—Dr. Perrine, the elderly dentist of Huxley, who was punched, kicked and soundly drubbed by John Kellington at the home of the latter, was arrested today by the police of this city, and is being held in the Tombs.

Dr. Perrine was arrested at his home in Huxley, N. J., where he was found by the police of this city, and is being held in the Tombs.

PULLER-IN ARRANGED.

Charged with Assaulting a Man Who Wouldn't Buy.

Policeman Devlin, of the Sixth Precinct, arraigned in the Tombs Court this morning, Jacob Harris, who is a puller-in for Harris Cohen, the clothes dealer at Baxter street and Park Row.

Three men, who were with Harris, were also arraigned, and charged with assaulting a man who wouldn't buy.

IN THE CORONER'S HANDS.

The First Cable Car Death to Be Thoroughly Investigated.

Coroner Schultze announced that he will thoroughly investigate the first fatal accident by the Broadway cable car, which resulted last evening in the death of seven-year-old Johnnie Wallace, who lived with his widowed mother at 721 Seventh avenue.

Johnnie was playing tag with other boys at Forty-eighth street and Seventh avenue, when cable car No. 9, in charge of Gripman Oliver Jones, knocked the lad down, face forward, and passed over his body, dragging him over the rough pavement.

DUEL WITH SHOTGUNS AVERTED.

World's Fair Commissioner Goes to Fight a Louisiana Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, June 20.—A few days ago Col. John C. Wickliffe, Louisiana Commissioner to the World's Fair, left Chicago for New Orleans, and it was supposed that he came home for the purpose of getting Gov. Foster to settle the disputes among the Louisiana Commissioners. It developed yesterday that his object was to fight a duel with a country editor.

At New Orleans, the editor of the Bunkie Blade, a paper published in Lafayette parish, wrote something to the effect that Col. Wickliffe, and a refusal to retract resulted in a challenge and the two men agreed to fight. The fight was to be fought with shotguns loaded with buckshot, at fifteen paces.

MADE HIS LIFE MISERABLE.

HOW MR. WYCKOFF SUFFERED FROM CATARRH OF THE HEAD AND THROAT.

He Says He Went to Doctors McCoy and Snow, and Under Their Treatment He Is Now as Well as It Is Possible for Any One to Be—Doctors McCoy and Snow Offer a Free Test of Their Treatment to Everybody.

Mr. R. F. Wyckoff, who lives at 121 East 44th street in this city, is well known in banking and financial circles in New York. Here is a statement he has made recently:

"For a long time I suffered from catarrh of the head and throat, and could not seem to find anything that would help me. I tried several remedies, but without success."

"I was troubled with severe pain in my head, and could scarcely breathe through my nose, while my throat was so badly irritated that a continual hacking cough made me miserable."

"Finally I was persuaded to try Doctors McCoy and Snow, who in a very few weeks gave me such relief that I felt like a new person, and am now as well as it is possible for any one to be in our changeable climate."

"I would advise any one suffering from similar troubles to consult Doctors McCoy and Snow, who can not only give relief, but in curable cases effect a permanent cure."
